HIS PAST

—From New York World.

It will be remembered that it was in 1904 that Roosevelt wrote the celebrated "My Dear Mr. Harriman" letter, saying "you and I are practical men" and asking the millionaire magnate to the White House, and after a conference that Mr. Harriman raised $240,000, which was used in the campaign; and that it was also in this campaign Perkins contributed toward Roosevelt's campaign insurance company money belonging to women and children.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills, and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes. Ed. D. In the Natural Course.
Life is ever unfolding from within and revealing itself to the light, and thoughts engendered in the heart at last reveal themselves in words, actions and things accomplished.—James Allen.

Shakespeare's Criticism.
"Tis the curse of service, preferment goes by letter and affection, and not in old gradation, where each second stood heir to the first.—Shakespeare.

Comforting Religion.
People like their religion to be what they call comforting. I want my religion to give me self-respect and courage. This sort of faith really overcomes the power of death.—Bernard Shaw.

NATURAL METHODS WITH GUINEAS.

Raising guineas on the canary cage plan is a trick which we have yet to see succeed because the guinea, like the turkey, is not yet denaturalized. There are certain conditions necessary for guinea eggs to be strongly fertilized to hatch well and for the keets to thrive and mature perfectly, and our pictures tell the story.

Mother Guinea was not raised in a bandbox. She and her mates roamed through wood and field, drank from crystal springs, perched with the birds and fed mostly on protein, nature's diet, found in the worms, insects, fruits, greens, grains and seeds on range.

This meant eggs, many eggs, eggs with strong, livable germs, and one day Mother Guinea stole away and hid her nest under a fallen tree top in the woods.

But it was what natural instinct dictated. It wasn't fancy. She simply scratched a hollow in the earth and laid there, but the nest was clean and the moisture from the ground added what was needed extra for perfect incubation.

There she sat, screened from crows and prowlers and undisturbed by bumbling humans until her patience was rewarded by the appearance of twenty-four lively polka dot darlings that with a strong kick came from her twenty-four eggs.

Did she at once lead them to the corner and stuff their little gizzards with fattener? Did she invite them to drink from the cow tracks in the barnyard and dig rot and myriad microbes for them from the manure pile?

Ah, no! That's the nature fake stunt of the old, lousy, scabby legged chuck. The guinea keet and turkey poult butcher.

Mother Guinea heard the call of the wild, and her little birds were hardly hatched till they were out of the nest into the brush and the green grasses, and their mother led them and fed them in nature's own good way, and when the "frost was on the pumpkin and the corn was in the shock" she marched from the fields with her handsome flock.

What did their feed cost? Nothing. What did they do for the farmer? Killed lots of worms, insects, ate many weed seeds and scared away the chicken hawks.

My friend, in raising guineas and turkeys follow nature's way, and it will pay.

DON'TS.

Don't waste time and feed trying to crate fatten fowls of the Leghorn type. Don't bother trying to finish culls. Once a cull always a cull.

Don't feed fowls on range heavy. They often get enough from the natural run to keep them in summer.

Don't let that poultry yard get rank. It's a detriment to the hen and a man's face to men.

Don't let the grass grow under your feet, but for that yellow leg color and health keep your fowls on grass run.

O YOU OLD WOODSHED!

How well I remember that old wood shed That hung on the wooden peg And that old sawbuck that I kicked when I was mad Till I almost broke a leg!

What a rasping sound came from that old shed When that dull saw was at work, And how often I got licked in that old woodshed When I the sawing shirked!

He-haw! He-haw! went that rusty old saw, And that sawbuck jumped round in the dust.

What an awful dull saw! What an awful backache! I was mad enough to bust!

And that dry, twisted hickory I can't forget, That hickory that bent the saw, And that stout hickory gad, so tough and sharp, That was wielded by my pa.

And there was that dull double blitted ax And the pitch pine I used to split, I can feel those splinters jam into my thumb And the cut where the old ax hit.

O you dusty old woodshed could your walls speak What a story they would tell Of a barefooted boy with a rusty old saw And a gad that was laid on well!

Yes, I hated that job, but I'm glad for the health That came from pushing that saw. Though it hurt like Sam Hill to get licked with that gad, I'm a better man, thanks to pa.

DYEING THE EGG YOLK.

Milady does like an egg with a big golden yolk, just as she wants the butter in pretty yellow prints and her broilers built on bright butter ball style. She knows that, while appearances are often deceitful, looks have a lot to do with making eats appetizing, and whenever people have the choice of yellow and light butter and yellow and light yolks in nearly every case they pick the yellow. Now, this is not a yellow streak. It's a fad. The purchaser often imagines the golden product tastes better; then, too, there are the enhanced beauty and increased allurements of that rich golden sponge cake and buttercup colored egg custard. This gold fever demand has made golden butter the year around. It's dyed. People dyed, too, before the law defined and declared what butter color butter-makers might use. Now there is such a demand for yellow yolks and eggs and they are selling at such a better price that egg farmers wish to dye the egg yolks, and this is easy.

They need not dye the hen nor dye at all. The color is not in the breed but in the feed. Yellow corn gives a rich yolk. Green grass, clover, alfalfa, as well as the cured product, make yellow yolks just as they make yellow cream and yellow butter. Wheat, oats, white corn, beef scrap, barley, cabbage, beets — these furnish the unpopular light yolk.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

A poultry show on Young's pier, at Atlantic City, N. J., from June 24 to Sept. 24 is one of the novelties of the sea son.

No one can get maximum results from capons that are kept with the general flock. Quiet is essential for massive growth and perfect finish. It is the same in crate fattening.

William Hofacker, poultry artist of the Philadelphia North American, is a fine poultry drawer, and he also draws on his imagination when he declares the Barred Rock "racial parent of the entire family" of Plymouth Rocks. How about those hybrid skin comb, silver penciled and Columbian Wyandottes recently admitted to the Rock family. Who's their pap anyway?

The question, "Do you keep pure bred poultry?" was put to 1,483 Ohio farmers by an institute lecturer, and only 142 replied in the affirmative. Ohio is not any farther back than some other states, but what a loss in poultry products when the farmer goes in for pure bred birds exclusively.

When Mrs. Ella Stokes of Blann, Pa. was halfway to church she heard noise under the buggy seat and hitting the cover, a broody hen flew out. She was sitting there on nineteen eggs, which a week later hatched a big bunch of fine chicks.

The 10,000 school children of Los Angeles, Cal., who engage in intensive farming on vacant lots and other lands provided by the board of education produce $250,000 during the vacation period. Mrs. Marc Lahey, the director, introduced advanced poultry culture this season. Time for the east to do likewise.

Wry tails and crooked backs may be expected where young fowls are allowed to crowd into warm coops at night, and it's remarkable how tightly they will wedge together. This affects the soft, growing skeleton and deformed unhealthy stock results.

A new departure in anarchism occurred in East New York when a bomb was thrown at early morn into a great chicken market among a thousand fowls. Two hundred were killed. One Italian was caught running away with fourteen roosters. It is supposed some one enraged by the incessant early crowing tried to get revenge.

Those who are anxious to grow fine plumage on their buff and brown chicks must be careful not to let them crowd into hot coops. Watch that fellow who crowds his Brown Leghorns into badly ventilated coops and you'll find many of his birds with white feathers in their wings.

A Reading (Cal.) business man was arrested and fined $25 for hitting a preacher with a rotten egg. Then the preacher lost his temper and was arrested for using strong language. The poor man was certainly egged on to it.

LAYING OUT A ROAD.

Billings Was in No Hurry, So the Work Was Done Right.

A good many years ago C. K. G. Billings, who made his millions in Chicago gas, bought a good sized plot of ground on the heights overlooking the Hudson river at the upper end of Manhattan Island. Some time later he put up a house which still remains the pride of "seeing New York" guides.

When the land had been bought the question arose as to the best means of laying out a roadway up the steep and rocky hill, at the crest of which the house was to stand. Mr. Billings was puzzled. He wanted to make it as easy a climb as he could. He mentioned the problem to his friend W. C. Muschenheim, a New York hotel proprietor. Mr. Muschenheim, who was familiar with the hills and dales of that part of New York, gave the following advice:

"You aren't in any great hurry, so why don't you have it done right? Put one of your cows on that land and give her time to lay out a path up that hill. Trust her to find the easiest and most comfortable grade."

Mr. Billings followed the suggestion, and in the course of time the cow made a path which has long since been developed into a permanent, winding, slowly ascending roadway.—Saturday Evening Post.

BIRTH OF A LETTER.

The Way "W" Came to Take the Place of the Old "VV."

The printers and language makers of the latter part of the sixteenth century began to recognize the fact that there was a sound in spoken English which was without a representative in the shape of an alphabetical sign or character, as in the first sound in the word "wet."

Prior to that time it had always been spelled as "vet," the v having the long sound of u or of two u's together. In order to convey an idea of the new sound they began to spell such words as "wet," "weather," "web," etc., with two u's, and as the u of that date was a typical v the three words above looked like this. "Vwet," "vweather," "vweb."

After awhile the typefounders recognized the fact that the double u had come to stay, so they joined the two u's together and made the character now so well known as w. There are books in which three forms of the w are given. The first is an old double v (vv); the next is one in which the last stroke of the first v crosses the first stroke of the second and the third is the common w we use today.

Antoine Deloria, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills." Ed. D. Heckerman.

Wireless

By F. MINTURN SAMMIS

Chief Engineer in America of the Marconi System and Assistant to Marconi in the early improvements of the original invention.

As wireless telegraphy grips the imagination of men more and more by its ever growing wonders, so does the marvel increase that its inventor developed and achieved his epoch-making idea when he was in age but a schoolboy, expected to do no more than study his lessons and enjoy himself. Guglielmo Marconi studied at the universities of Bologna and Padua, and when only 15 years old, on his father's estate near Bologna, Italy, plunged enthusiastically into the dreamlands of electricity. In the course of the next few years he headed straight for one of its great mysteries, the so-called Hertzian waves, or electrical impulses which could travel through air without the use of a wire. In 1895, when he was only 20 years old, his advanced knowledge on this obscure subject inspired him with the theory that these waves could be sent out and received at will, and in that year he had constructed the first wireless apparatus, whose efficiency astonished even his enthusiasm.

Wireless telegraphy under the masterful hand of Guglielmo Marconi sprang into commercial success in a remarkably short space of time. Prior to 1895, electromagnetic waves had been discovered, and men of many countries had experimented with them, but it remained for Marconi to see that these waves could be harnessed and made the servant of man, that they could be made to transmit intelligence from ship to shore and from one continent to another.

The waves or vibrations that made wireless telegraphy possible are in many respects similar to those of light. They travel at the same tremendous speed of 186,330 miles a second. There are several ways of producing these waves, but the one in common use is called the spark method. Briefly, it is this: An induction coil or high-tension transformer is connected to an electric-current supply so as to produce a spark across an air space. By opening or closing an ordinary telegraph key the operator causes a spark of longer or shorter duration to jump across the air space. This spark produces the vibrations by virtue of its oscillator character. In other words, it acts similarly to a straight spring drawn back and suddenly released. It vibrates to and fro until its energy is exhausted and the rate at which it vibrates is determined by its length. By varying the rate of vibration longer or shorter waves may be produced. By means of a device, called the oscillation transformer, the vibrations are transferred from the primary circuit to the aerial or mast-head wire, always conspicuous at any wireless-telegraph station, thus performing the same function relative to the spark-gap circuit that a radiator does to a steam-heating boiler.

That which is called "tuning" has to do with the adjustment of the wave length of the aerial wire to that of the closed circuit. In this manner a receiving station may be tuned to a transmitting station or, in other words, the instruments of the former so adjusted that they will be more sensitive to the waves from the latter than to those from other stations.

In the receiving system the same aerial wire and a smaller oscillation transformer are used, but in lieu of the spark gap we have the detector. This detector may consist of a special form of glow lamp, called an oscillation valve, or of a mineral or crystal such as silicon or carborundum, or other devices. However constructed, the various detectors serve the purpose of causing an intermittent current to flow through the operator's telephone receivers, thus producing audible dots and dashes, corresponding to the shorter or longer duration of the impulses sent out by the transmitting station. This brief account describes with fair accuracy the commercial, tuned wireless system of today.

At the present time there may be found stations a thousand miles up the Amazon River working 500 miles over land through the virgin forest, and huge commercial stations flashing thousands of words daily across the broad Atlantic, and yet the art is still in its infancy. Mr. Marconi, ever looking for new worlds to conquer, and confident in his ability, gained by years of hard work and painstaking experiment, is about to start the work of erecting 11 huge stations that will completely encircle the world.

There is something fascinating and inspiring about the pioneer work of any great achievement, and the writer feels that he has been honored in having a part in the early development in the United States of so important an art as that of wireless telegraphy. It has been particularly pleasant to have been engaged in this work as one of Mr. Marconi's engineers.—August Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The Opening of the Schools

The noblest institution of our country is her Public School System, which guarantees to the children of her citizens an education to fit them for usefulness and qualify them for success in life's work. The range of this educational system is wider than many imagine, and includes not only the so-called "common branches" but also manual training, music, drawing, domestic science, hygiene, physics, chemistry and college preparatory.

The peculiar value of the system is its power of assimilation. This phase is most marked in the larger cities and towns where the foreign element is represented. Here the Public Schools receive thousands of the children of foreigners who are ignorant not only of our form of government but of our very language, yet these children by our system of popular education are both cultured and Americanized during the period spent in our common schools.

This result is of priceless worth to our country, for no matter from what nations these children may have been imported, or how illiterate their parents or themselves may be, when they pass under the influence of our public schools, they lose their foreign flavor and become intelligent and enthusiastic Americans.

The pupils of our Bedford schools stand on the threshold of another year of study. A great amount of money and forethought has been spent by the Directors and Faculty to make the coming year a successful one. It is to be hoped that the pupils will meet this generous spirit on the part of the school authorities, so that by faithful attendance and diligent study they will get a dollar's worth of education for every dollar expended by the citizens in support of the schools.

Just one suggestion to all the parents of the borough: Remember that much of the success of the coming year will depend upon your personal attitude toward the schools, hence impress upon your children the necessity of good conduct; teachers are there to teach and not to keep order. See to it that your children devote a fair amount of time to home study. This will avoid poor recitations in the class rooms. Take a large personal interest in the welfare of the schools and support the directors and faculty in their real desire to make the current year the best in the educational history of the borough.—Contributed.

Attended Williams' Grove Picnic

Rt. 2, Everett, Pa., Sept. 2, 1912.

Editor of Gazette.

Among the many who attended the exhibition at Williams' Grove last week were F. M. Ott, D. C. Ott, C. M. Ott, P. G. Ott and E. P. Bingham, of Colerain Township, going by way of Bedford to Cessna in Mr. Bingham's auto. At Cessna they bought tickets over the P. R. R. to Altoona where they stopped for the night. Thursday morning they bought return tickets from that place to the grove, arriving on the ground at noon. They report having seen Gov. Woodrow Wilson, who was thronged and cheered by thirty thousand people. He spoke in the hall and on the grounds, and is an able speaker, appealing strongly to the farmers.

There was a great display of machinery on the grounds, principally engines. Over 200 gasoline engines of all makes from all over the United States, all of which were in motion, running some kind of machine. There were also many steam engines of various makes and sizes, steam road rollers, etc., practically all in motion at one time, making a humming noise one will not soon forget.

Dinner and supper were served on the grounds at the dining hall. Trains every 30 minutes poured into the grounds from Harrisburg, all crowded to their capacity.

On Friday this band of visitors from the Cove took in the many sights at Harrisburg. The Capitol and Library buildings are very fine; the city is exceptionally clean and beautifully laid out, having a nice auto drive around the park. They returned home the last of the week, feeling much pleased and greatly profited by the trip. Subscriber.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

is to paint when your property needs it. Paint-foolish to wait for the price to go down.

But so many are foolish, they'll wait a good while.

The whole rise in the cost of a job is 10 percent. The first year's drop won't be more than half that, more likely a quarter.

Waiting for 5 percent, more likely 2 1/2.

The average job (with Devco) is $50; 5 percent, $2.50. Put it off for $2.50? Guess not.

You think of that job as $100. So it is with inferior paint.

September 4—Miss Mattie Miller of Spring Meadow was a visitor in our vicinity this week.

Mrs. Sarah A. Blackburn of Johnstown was calling on old time friends on Sunday.

E. F. Custer, wife and two children were guests in our village on Friday and Saturday.

Miss Rue Michel and Mrs. Simon R. Blackburn, of Windber, were visitors in our village a few days this week.

Miss Minnie Mock of Rummell and Mrs. A. E. Stoner and daughter Helen, of Hamlin, Kan., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Rowzer not long since.

Mrs. Rebecca A. Miller of Lovely and George McCreary of Roaring Spring paid their sister, Mrs. Mary Gessel, who has been quite ill for some time, a visit on Sunday.

D. McDougall, president and C. H. Goetz, manager, of the Maryland Lightning Rod Company, are in our vicinity introducing their work, which appears to be giving satisfaction in quality and material used, workmanship executed and terms for doing the same. The company made no mistake when they employed "Charley" their manager thirty-six years ago.

Our band boys, as well as many others of our village and vicinity, attended the Miller reunion near Helixville on Saturday. Those present report a large turn-out, considering the threatening rain in the morning. A fine dinner was served and an excellent treat in the way of an entertainment of exercises enjoyed. A permanent organization was effected. Caj.

September 4—Our farmers are very busy getting the ground ready for seeding.

Mrs. Brant of Shanksville is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. L. Hull.

Mrs. D. F. Deaner spent Saturday and Sunday visiting friends at Altoona.

Elias Blackburn of Fishertown and Mr. Furnace of Ohio were visitors at the home of Enos Blackburn last Friday.

Elmer Gordon, who is working on a saw mill near New Enterprise, was home over Sunday.

Miss May Daugherty went to the Roaring Spring Hospital on Monday and will probably be operated upon for gall stone.

D. E. Miller, wife and child, of near this place, attended the Miller reunion at Helixville last Saturday.

R. C. Smith and wife, of Point, and Albert Hoover and family, Mrs. W. C. Hoover and Simon Hammaker and wife, of Fishertown, were guests of William D. and Miss Cora Hoover on Sunday.

There will be a picnic in Manges' woods near Fishertown Station on Saturday, September 14. This picnic is being held by members of the Reformed Church of Johnstown, who will come on the morning train. Music will be furnished by the choir of the church, which is under the leadership of C. W. Hershberger. Members of the Reformed Church of Fishertown and St. Paul's Church, Cessna, as well as all others who may wish to attend, are earnestly requested to meet with them for a day's outing.

Your correspondent has in his possession a letter written by Fred, the twelve-year-old son of S. W. and Margaret McMullin, of Windber, former residents of Point. The unfortunate boy is deaf and dumb and has been attending an institution for those so afflicted only three terms. The letter was composed and written by the boy himself and shows a marked degree of advancement.

An Unexplained Affair

Only Two Persons Understood It

By F. A. MITCHEL

Silas Barker was a bachelor farmer of thirty-five, in good health, prosperous and steadily growing rich. One who saw him and remarked upon his condition would not dream that there was anything in the world he wanted any less it was a wife.

There was a fog in Mr. Barker's farm that made it look something like a pie, with one piece cut out of it. This piece was owned by Miss Clementine Wilson, a maiden lady a year or two older or a year or two younger—the women of the locality all claimed that she was older—who lived alone, just as Silas did, and every one said what a sensible thing it would be for Silas to marry her and complete the circular outline of his farm.

One day Miss Wilson received a call from a real estate agent, who asked if she would care to sell her property, adding that if she did he thought he had a purchaser for it. Miss Wilson told him that she had never considered selling it, but she would think the matter over and if she came to a conclusion to part with it she would let him know. The agent left his card with his address on it and departed.

A few days later she wrote a note to Mr. Barker in which she told him that she had been approached with a view to the purchase of her property and since she supposed that if it changed hands it should be a part of his farm she thought it proper to notify him before taking any action in the matter. To this note she received a reply stating that he had as much land already as he had ready capital to work and did not care to purchase any more. However, he thanked her for notifying him.

Here the matter ended for the time being except that Miss Wilson wrote to the agent to ask what price would be offered for her property and received a reply that he could get for it what she considered about half its value. To the offer she made no reply.

Though Silas and Clementine had been neighbors for years, they had had nothing more than a speaking acquaintance. One day some time after Clementine had been approached with reference to the purchase of her property when coming from the postoffice she met Silas on the road. He stopped to reiterate his thanks for her notification and to explain why he wouldn't care to buy her farm. He would have to enlarge his buildings, buy new implements and all that.

"By the bye, Miss Wilson," he said, "I find it kind of lonesome evenings at home, and I've often thought I'd like to come down to your place and visit for awhile."

A light of mingled pride and pleasure came into the woman's eye at this expressed wish of one she had always considered her superior. She replied that she was always at home evenings and would be glad to see him any time he chose to drop in. He called the next week, and the day after the farmers' wives and daughters round about were passing the news that Silas Barker was going to marry Clementine Wilson and unite the two farms.

Nor was it long before appearances seemed to justify the report. Miss Wilson began to "spruce up." Instead of being the worst dressed woman in the county she became the best dressed. Watchers averred that Silas spent two evenings a week with her. On Sunday afternoons he drove her out in his side-saddle buggy with red wheels. The women began to say that the day was for the wedding when suddenly the affair was off.

No one dared ask Silas what had come between the two, and as for Clementine she wouldn't tell. But it leaked out that Clementine's farm had something to do with the matter. This was puzzling, because it was supposed that adding her farm to Barker's was an element of strength in the matter. Then an uncle of Clementine's who was her financial adviser let it all out.

"Si Barker," he said, "is the meanest man out of jail. What he was after was Clem's farm. He sent a real estate agent to buy it for a song. Clem wrote Barker about the offer, knowing that if the property passed out of her hands it ought to pass into Barker's. He said he didn't want it. The reason he did this was 'thinkin' if he bought it from her direct he'd have to pay a fair price for it. When the scheme failed he set in to court her. The next morning he went so far that the day was set for the wedding. Then Clem found that he wanted her to deed her farm to him in consideration of a money payment of $50 an acre when she could get a hundred for it by lettin' it be known that it was for sale. He said that since the property was to be united that was the legal way to do it. Clem saw his game and 'broke it all off.'"

While previous to this denouement Silas Barker had stood well in the community, after it he lost caste with his neighbors. Some who had suffered by certain underhanded schemes of his, twitted him on his inglorious failure; others, while outwardly they treated him as before, inwardly knit their brows and drew down the corners of their mouths when they saw him coming. But this in no way interfered with his prosperity. Barker's credit was A1 at his bank. He was always ready to protect his crops in case of unfavorable weather and always got the best prices for his products.

"It's a mistake," said Deacon Hargreaves, "to say that honesty's the best policy in business. That might have been so once, but now it is different. But it's never different so far as conscience and comfort are concerned, and in that respect dishonesty doesn't pay either in the long run or the short run."

There was bitterness between the two so called lovers. And yet no one knew how much of love and how much of interest lay between them, though it was generally supposed that what there was of tender feeling was all on the side of the lady. And yet some who knew Barker best—or thought they did—declared that he was much "cut up" at the outcome of the affair. Most of the women condemned his action with indignation, but there were those who said that Clem Wilson was a fool to reject the only offer she had ever had or was ever likely to receive; that Barker was only providing for future emergencies in legally making the property one before the marriage. But the fact that the consideration was not $1, the amount stipulated in formal documents, indicated that Barker never had such an intention, but did intend the courtship simply as a means of buying the Wilson farm for half its value.

While Barker never spoke of the matter between himself and Miss Wilson, he gave every indication of bitterness toward her. As to Clementine, she had lived before her engagement a patient, plodding life, and after her disappointment she resumed it. When the finer clothes she had put on during the courtship were worn out she did not replace them. If she met her ex-lover on the road she spoke to him as pleasantly as before her discovery of his game to secure her property.

At one time a rumor was started that the matter was about to be patched up between the two, but it could never be traced to any reliable foundation, and, since a statement was coupled with it that Barker was the one who wished the reconciliation, no one believed it from the first. At any rate, the rumor was never confirmed by any change in the treatment of the parties of each other.

One day the doctor was called in to see Barker and when he left the house told those who asked about his patient that he had typhoid fever. The doctor went every day to see the invalid and finally let it be known that Barker was a very sick man.

One thing was noticed during the illness that was much talked about. Clementine Wilson was seen standing at the door of the Barker farmhouse with a bowl of soup in her hands. Some one came to the door; Clementine said something; the person disappeared and returned. Then Clementine went away with the soup.

It was surmised that an offering had been refused, and whatever sympathy had arisen for the sick man was blighted by his inhuman treatment of the woman he had been engaged to marry. Some of the women offered Miss Wilson their sympathy, at the same time animadverting upon her former lover's cruel act. But Clementine refused to listen to them.

One morning there was crape on the door of the Barker farmhouse. Tongues began to wag as to what would be come of the property he had acquired, he having none but distant relatives. Every one thought of Miss Wilson and what had slipped through her fingers.

"She ought to have sold him her property for nothing," said some. "She'd have it all back now."

"She wouldn't any such thing," said another. "He never had any idea of marrying her."

"Wonder if she'll go to the funeral?" "I should think she would. There oughtn't to be any hard feeling after death."

"I should think she wouldn't. What business has she at the funeral of a man that treated her as he did?" And so the gossip went on. Clementine gave out the first bit of information she had to give. She would not attend the funeral because she did not wish to be remarked upon and because Mr. Barker's death ended the saddest affair of her life, and she did not think she had the fortitude to stand being present at his funeral.

So the funeral took place without any one being present who was or ever had been nearly connected with the deceased. The next day a lawyer sent Clem a notice that the will would be opened at a certain date, and she was invited to be present.

Whatever were her feelings at this information she kept them to herself. She went to the appointed place—the Barker farmhouse—and found there two or three distant connections of the deceased. The will was opened and read as follows:

I bequeath all my property, real and personal, to Clementine Wilson.

When it was known that the jilted woman had received some $100,000 from the man who had jilted her the previous warring of tongues compared with that which followed was like a tinkle of bells beside the din of battle.

What did it all mean? No one except Clementine Wilson knew, and she never told. But we do know that the human heart gives us some inscrutable mysteries; that side by side with the most contemptible meanness lies the deepest, the most enduring love. And usually those who feel deepest are most prone to hide their affairs and their feelings. No one can contemplate what is plainly indicated by Barker's action without making an inference that his nature and his habit of life cost him a happiness he ardently desired.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land? He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are carried through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Miss LORRAINE KENNEL of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles, an anxiety of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I thank you for your remedy. I wish to call special attention to your good work."

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson X.—Third Quarter; For
Sept. 8, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. ix, 35, to x, 15.
Memory Verses, 7, 8—Golden Text,
Matt. x, 40—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

If we consider the full portion assigned by the committee for the lesson today we begin with ix, 35, "Jesus went about all the cities and villages teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom and healing every sickness and every disease among the people" (almost identical with iv, 23), and end with, "When Jesus had made an end of commanding His twelve disciples He departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities." Thus is summarized the daily life of Jesus and His followers, telling of the kingdom and showing how our mortal bodies will then be affected. It seems to me that there is a great difference between teaching people how to reach Heaven when they have to leave these mortal bodies and telling them of a kingdom of peace and righteousness on this earth over which we shall reign with the Lord Jesus Christ in bodies like His glorified body and never again be weak or weary or sick or die.

The work of the devil has been so long manifest in the result of sin and the curse that it is generally accepted as the normal condition, and no other is looked for. Jesus had ever before Him the joy and glory of this kingdom of which He loved to tell and give samples of it, and looking upon the earth bound multitudes who knew not of it, He was filled with compassion upon them as He saw them groveling and no one to tell them of the glory and how to get it. A plentiful harvest to be reaped, but few laborers. Therefore ask the Lord to send forth the laborers. It rounds a little strange to ask the Lord of the harvest to see to His own affairs. It is His harvest, and He cares, and yet we are to ask Him to send forth the laborers. In Isa. vi, 8, He asks, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" And it is for the willing ones to say: "Here am I. Send me." The question then seems to be that of I Chron. xxix, 5, "Who, then, is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?" This of our lesson seems to refer the matter back to the Lord, but there is at least this in it: We cannot honestly ask Him to send forth laborers unless we are willing to say, Here am I; send me. This seems to be implied also in what He then did, for He called the twelve unto Him, gave them power over unclean spirits and all manner of sickness and disease and sent them forth to do as He had been doing—preach the kingdom of heaven as at hand, heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils and as they had freely received the power, so freely bestow the benefits (verses 7, 8). Miracles had been wrought through Moses and Elijah and Elisha, some of judgment and some of mercy, but never before had a commission just like this been given to men, and it seems to have been given equally to all, even to Judas Iscariot. They were His, all but Judas, who betrayed Him, and the power was His, all was of Him, and they were His messengers.

As the Father spoke through Him and wrought through Him, so He would speak and work through them. They were for Him; He was for and with them and would see to the results. So it is or should be still—God working in us to will and to do of His good pleasure (Phil. ii, 13).

The great question in any good work is generally that of funds to carry it on, but He told them not to be anxious about that, as He would see to it. Matt. vi, 33, stands always, or, as some one has put it, Make thou His service thy delight, He'll make thy wants His care. As in Deut. xx, 10-12, they were to carry peace everywhere, leaving it to the people to accept or reject it. There was one seemingly strange thing about their commission. They were not to go to either gentiles or Samaritans, but only to Israel, and He said to the woman of Tyre and Sidon, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Matt. xv, 24). It was not until Israel had rejected Him and crucified Him and He was risen from the dead that He gave commission to go into all the world.

There are truths in this chapter which apply to the whole of this age, while some have special reference to the sending forth of the twelve. He is always the same, and the world will be the same as long as it has its present ruler, whom He will send to the pit when He sets up His kingdom. Those who are truly His and filled with His spirit must expect to find themselves as sheep in the midst of wolves, hated for His sake, persecuted, treated as He was, for the disciple is not above his Master. In emergencies, when under arrest, we can trust the Holy Spirit to speak through us (verse 20), and we should be so filled that He can speak through us at all times. He is always ready to make true to His messengers Ex. iv, 12; Jer. i, 7-9. Those whom He sends must be without fear of any kind, even of death. See the three "fear nots" of verses 26, 28, 31, and the comfort to be obtained by considering even sparrows. Note in verses 37-39 the whole hearted, self-renouncing devotion to Himself which He expects and in verse 42 the reward for the smallest service.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

When the illustrious Grant asked a third term the people of New England thundered their "No." Is this the reason Roosevelt calls New Englanders "ignorant, prejudiced and craven" in his recent speech?

A Disappointment

By MARGARET BARR

My Dear Helen—I have something to tell you which I am sure will interest you; besides, I wish your sympathy. I have met with a disappointment and a loss at the same time. Oh, dear, what a world this is!

But I must not begin at the wrong end or there will be no story.

We are expecting to go abroad next autumn, to be absent at least a year, and I know no language except my own native tongue and French. Since we are to spend the winter in Italy I concluded to study the Italian language. In order to be able to speak it well enough to enter society, especially in Rome, where we have advantages in the way of introduction, I concluded to take lessons. I secured a teacher who was born and educated in Florence and a member of a good family there, so I could be sure that I would get the language pure.

Having only a few months for study in order to progress rapidly I determined to engage an Italian maid. I advertised for one and received a number of replies. I called for several of them to come to see me, and after inspecting them all I chose one calling herself Vittoria. She told me her other name, but I was not interested in that.

I chose Vittoria because she seemed to be of so much higher grade than the others and because my Italian teacher, after talking with her, told me that she spoke the language with tolerable correctness. Since this was all I wanted her for I decided to give her the position at once. Clarisse, you know, is my personal maid, who attends me when I am making my toilet, does my hair and all that.

Well, I found Vittoria quite valuable to converse with. While I got nothing from her of the construction of the language, the practice of talking with her advanced me more rapidly than my regular lessons. She spoke French as well as Italian, and she and Clarisse became very good friends. You know how nice it is to have servants who get on well together. If they are at swords' points one has no comfort. Besides they divided the work very well between them. Vittoria would have nothing to do with my toilet, and Clarisse had no reason to fear that the Italian would become necessary to me. The arrangement suited me exactly.

The friendship between Clarisse and Vittoria seemed to be continually growing. It appeared that there must be some bond between them. I questioned Clarisse about it, but got no satisfaction. Then Clarisse began to look worried. Again I tried to get out of her if there was anything on her mind, but she would not tell me. One day I tried Vittoria, asking her what was the matter with Clarisse. She told me that Clarisse had a lover. She had told her (Vittoria) about him and had introduced him to her. Vittoria took a great dislike to him and advised Clarisse to have nothing to do with him. Vittoria also asked me to say nothing to Clarisse about the information she had given me, for Clarisse would certainly regard it as a betrayal of confidence.

This seemed to me a very satisfactory explanation. Vittoria after having informed me of Clarisse's infatuation and that she was trying to induce her to give up an unworthy lover, made no effort to conceal their interest in one another and once or twice they asked to have the same afternoon off. This I granted, of course, wishing to give Vittoria every opportunity to argue with Clarisse against yielding to a love that would likely turn out unfortunately. I suppose it was very selfish in me, but I have been so dependent on Clarisse for so long that to lose her through a marriage or from any other cause would break my heart.

So matters drifted on. One afternoon I returned from a bridge party and went to my room. It was Clarisse's afternoon out. A bureau drawer containing my jewels in use, which I kept always locked, stood open and the jewels gone. Suspecting that burglars had been in the house, I rushed to a closet where I kept an iron box containing my most valuable gems. It, too, had been rifled. I called for Vittoria. She did not reply. Great heavens! What did it mean? My jewels, worth many thousands of dollars, had been taken, and my Italian maid, who was expected to be close at hand when my French maid was absent, did not answer when called.

In the midst of my confusion Clarisse came in. When I showed her my empty jewel boxes I thought she would faint. I was obliged to support her. She tried to say something to me, but her voice failed her.

"Never mind, Clarisse," I said soothingly. "I know what you would say. Vittoria has turned out to be a thief. She has deceived us both. She told me that you had a lover who was unworthy of you and she was trying to dissuade you from him."

"She," repeated Clarisse, covering her face with her hands. "Vittoria is a man!"

"Great heavens!"

"He confided his secret to me; told me that for love of me he had dressed as a woman that he might be near me. I knew I was wrong to listen to him, but I did my faith! What shall I do?"

How women may be hoodwinked by men. I don't care so much for the jewels, since I can buy those of later style, but I am so disappointed at losing my practice in speaking Italian.

Nervous? Thin? Pale?

Are you easily tired, lack your usual vigor and strength? Then your digestion must be poor, your blood must be thin, your nerves must be weak. You need a strong tonic. You need Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. We believe your doctor will endorse these statements. Ask and find out.

If you think constipation is of trifling consequence, just ask your doctor. He will disabuse you of that notion in short order. "Correct it at once!" he will say. Then ask him about Ayer's Pills. A mild liver pill, all vegetable.

CATS AS THEY FALL.

They Can Land on Their Feet No Matter How They Drop.

It is a common saying that if a cat is dropped in any way whatever it will always alight on its feet. Since a man cannot lift himself by his boot straps or a boat cannot propel itself through the water except by pressing against the water in some way one may well wonder whether this is not one of the common sayings which are fallacious. The general principles involved are of such interest that the question was taken up a few years ago for consideration at a session of a French scientific society.

It is a fact that it is dynamically possible for a cat to turn over, no matter how dropped, and experiments have shown that they actually do it. If a balloonist or air man should fall from a great height and should find that he were descending so as to strike on his head he could turn himself over so as to strike upon his feet if he knew the proper means of accomplishing it. But the distance he would have to fall in order to have time to turn over would be so great that he could have only an academic interest in striking on his feet rather than on his head, for the final result to him would be the same in either case.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Hindu Caste.

The four grades of society among the Hindus are the Brahmins or sacerdotal class, who are said at the moment of creation to have issued from the mouth of Brahma; the Kshatrya or Chuttee or military class, sprung from the arm of Brahma; the Vaisya or Bala or mercantile class, from the thigh of Brahma; and Sudras or Soothers or servile class, from the foot of Brahma. The business of the Sudras is to serve the three superior classes, more especially the Brahmins. Their condition is never to be improved. They are not to accumulate property and are unable by any means to approach the dignity of the higher classes. These divisions are hereditary, impassable and inde-feasible.

Precedent For "Governess."
 Albert VII., archduke of Austria, married Isabella Clara Eugenie, in feta of Spain, who brought to him as dowry the sovereignty of the Low Countries, etc. When Philip IV. of Spain ascended the throne in 1621 he took from his aunt the sovereignty of the Low Countries, but left her the title of governess. Her husband died soon after, whereupon she took the veil though still retaining the reins of government. She died at Brussels in 1633, aged sixty-six. Here there is precedent for the use of the word governess when a lady holds the post.—London Notes and Queries.

She Appeared Only to a Child

By F. A. MITCHEL

We in America who have outgrown a belief in the supernatural are not impressed by those legends that are still in vogue among peoples nearer to nature. Science, while it has advanced us, has taken much of the imagination out of us, leaving us like the stalks from which flowers have been stripped. I have envied those untutored persons who still believe the dead may at times mingle with the living.

While traveling in Spain I stopped for a few days in the province of La Mancha. The peasants of the region are much given to legends and believe in ghosts. I was walking through a valley one day when I came to a little church surrounded by the typical yard studded with tombstones. I went through the gate and came upon the sexton, who was digging a grave. It was a peaceful place, a hamlet of the dead, "each in his narrow cell," and I found myself regarding it as such rather than that the heaped mounds should cover only earth. I spoke to the sexton, who got out of the grave to answer certain questions I asked him. "Do you believe the dead ever come out of their graves and walk about here?"

"I have seen them myself, senor," he replied.

"In what form?"

"Of a moonlight night I have seen airy figures moving about among the tombs."

"Near by or from a distance?"

"From a distance. They are shy of us mortals."

"Don't you think what you say you have seen were rays of moonlight coming through the branches of the trees?"

"Oh, no, senor," he replied. "They are really the dead. But it is of no use to try to get near them, for as soon as mortals approach they become invisible."

"Are there no persons they will permit to approach them?"

Now, I asked the question with a purpose, for I confess I am not a disbeliever in communications between the living and the dead and have a belief in the theory that some persons are susceptible of being impressed by spirits—in other words, are mediums.

The man leaned on his spade and appeared to be thinking. The southern sun gilded his wrinkled brow as he framed his reply, and it occurred to me that he would make a fine model for an artist.

"The only persons I have ever known them to appear to in their human shapes are children. There is one person buried here—a woman—who will always manifest herself to a child. They say, senor, that she lost all of her children before they reached the age of twelve. If a child comes here she will arise from her grave and sit upon the tomb built over it and look at the little one wistfully."

This was something definite, and I became interested. "Will she permit a child to approach her?" I asked.

"The children who have seen her say that as they approach she fades away and when they get to the tomb there is no one there."

"Do the children only see her when they are alone?"

"Children are never here alone. They are not admitted when alone. If they come it is under the care of older persons."

"And do the older persons see this spirit?"

"No, senor; they do not."

"I cannot believe your story, but I admit there is something about it that appeals to me."

"If senor will bring a child he will be convinced."

That would be easy. I was traveling with a party of Americans, among whom were several children. I could easily bring one of them to the churchyard. I chatted for some time longer with the sexton; then, putting a piece of money in his hand and telling him I would be with him the next afternoon, I left him.

There was a boy of seven in our party, a delicately organized little fellow, and I asked him the next day to go to walk with me. He gladly assented, and I took him to the churchyard. The sexton was there putting supports under some of the tottering stones, and I chatted with him while the boy played among the tombs. I kept my eye on the child and presently saw him looking in the direction of the tomb of the lady who appeared to children. Then he began to move slowly toward it. The sexton noticed him and gave me a knowing look. The boy kept his eye fixed on the tomb and approached it with timid steps. When he came near it he paused. Then presently he turned and retraced his steps.

"Why did you go to that tomb?" I asked him.

"Because I saw a lady sitting on it who beckoned me to come to her. But when I got to the tomb she wasn't there."

"What became of her?"

"I don't know."

"What did she look like?"

"I thought her kind looking lady, and it seemed as if she wanted to take me in her arms and pet me."

"Did you ever see her before?"

"No."

"You see," said the sexton, "I did not tell you an untruth."

Nor did he to the best of my knowledge and belief. I do not expect others to believe that the boy saw a spirit, but for myself how can I help it?

Barnett's Store

THE HOUSE THAT SAVES YOU MONEY

THIS week we call your attention to our splendid line of Travelers' Goods.

Now is the time when your son or daughter who is going to College, or some member of the family expects to take a trip, that a Trunk, Bag or Suit Case is needed. In these baggage-smashing days, only the reliable, well-made Trunks are able to survive a railroad journey of any considerable distance. We pride ourselves on the high grades of Travelers' Goods of which we have the reputation of selling the best. We have every piece made-to-order and if we find a weak place in any of them—a bolt, stay, strap or rivet is put on to make it strong and durable.

The prices on our Trunks are not extravagant. For $2.50 we will sell you a nice, well-made Trunk with two broad leather straps around. These are not large sizes, but they have lots of room in them. We have some Trunks that are 40 inches long. Of course they are worth more.

For $5.00 and $6.00 we have Trunks that are good enough to stand a trip around the world.

A splendid assortment of Bags and Suit Cases is always found at this store. From the imitation leather bag at 50c and 75c to the finest seal grain and walrus leathers at $10.00 to $15.00, for sizes 14 to 20 inches.

In Suit Cases our line begins in price at 90c and rises by easy stages to $10.00, size 24 inch.

At $4.00 and $5.00 we show you the best Cases we think ever brought to this town.

We will consider it a favor to show you our stock of Travelers' Goods. Your initials painted on if wanted.

NOTICE

The money collected by me toward the burial of Mrs. William Thomas was not used for that purpose for the reason there was found an Insurance Policy, which covered the funeral expenses. As it would be impossible for me to return this money, no names being put on the paper, simply the word cash, it has been thought best to turn the same over to the Charity Fund of Bedford and let the members use it in relieving suffering among the poor from time to time. The amount, $35.05, has been added to the fund.
